FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Forty years!

It's hard to believe that it was just more than 40 years ago that Jack Murdock crafted a last will and testament with plans for creating a charitable trust to be launched upon the event of his death (which would come much sooner than he knew).

"I can't imagine what the world will be like 40 years from now," Jack is to have said. That is why Jack counted on the Trustees and staff to invest these resources in ways that would make a difference in helping individuals, families, and communities in the future.

In some ways, Jack Murdock's world of the 1960s and '70s was very different, and in some ways not unlike today. There were no personal computers, much less an Internet, but technology was on the rise. The complexity and challenge of wars in Southeast Asia were a national and international concern. There was a strong focus on protecting American jobs and renewing American productivity. The Beatles were breaking up, but Rock was on a roll. Tensions with Russia and China were high. Inflation and the economy were of significant concern.

While some things are strikingly familiar, we do live in a different world today. The challenges we face have grown more complex and numerous. The noise and clamor of our media-saturated world can make it hard to see or hear the good things happening or the positive things being done. The willingness of people who may disagree on some things to work together has become strained. The global economy is still developing, and national economies feel the related challenges. These are challenging days, but they are also days of hope, possibility, promise, and breakthrough.

We look back on the foresight Jack Murdock had more than 40 years ago, as well as the hope he had for the future. Jack was an entrepreneur and an avid student of people. He and Howard Vollum and their colleagues built a company in Tektronix that was one of the early innovators in investing in workers, championing creativity, encouraging new ideas, fostering partnerships, and being great "investors" in communities. I love meeting and hearing stories from those who knew Jack Murdock or were part of those early days at Tektronix.

Jack also knew the importance of stewarding people and resources carefully, building capacity, thoughtful planning, and purposeful risk. We have the privilege to build on the vision and ideas that Jack Murdock held. We are deeply honored to partner with a widely diverse group of people and organizations that share the vision of communities flourishing, of making the world a better place so that 40 years from now, those who follow will look back and say about us:

"Thanks for thinking, planning, investing, and working with the future – the 2050s – in mind."

Imagine that!

In this report, we mark just a few of those milestone moments, programs, and investments that the Trust has made in strengthening the educational, cultural, social, and spiritual base in creative and sustainable ways, and more than a few of the organizations with whom we have partnered.

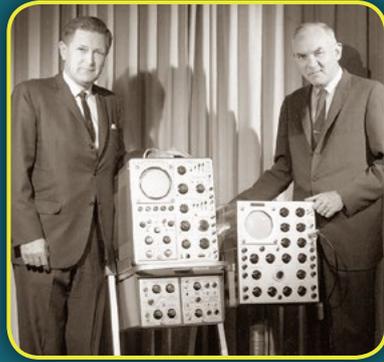

We hope you enjoy seeing these as much as we have had celebrating and reflecting on them.

Steve Moore
Executive Director

MEET OUR BENEFACTOR, JACK MURDOCK

Early on, Jack discovered a love for technology and innovation. Out of this interest, he and Howard Vollum co-founded Tektronix, and Jack encouraged entrepreneurial companies like FEI, ESI, and others, the ripples of which can be seen in the Silicon Forest Universe map on pages 10 and 11 of this annual report. Today, the Trust supports innovative nonprofits such as Full Circle Exchange, ONABEN, and Praxis, and thoughtful solutions to address some of our society's most pressing issues.

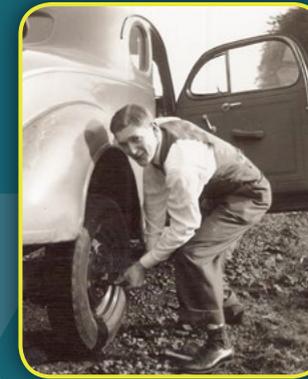

Jack had a close friendship with doctors William and Karl Menninger, who were prominent mental health pioneers in American culture and innovators in addressing the mental health needs in our society and encouraging community health. The Trust partners with organizations that address mental health issues through caring, collaborative solutions. From Albertina Kerr, the Trust's first grantee, to LifeWorks NW, Unity Center for Behavioral Health, and the Native Wellness Warriors program in Alaska, the Trust salutes those working in this critical area in our culture, addressing mental health.

The Trust values faith-based and mission-driven organizations as an integral part of the fabric of our communities and sees their involvement in the public square in addressing challenging issues of our day. The Trust supports groups like Salvation Army, CityServe, Muslim Educational Trust, Oregon Jewish Museum, Ecumenical Ministries, and faith-based schools and programs.

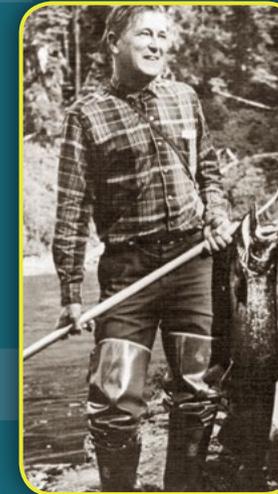

Jack and Howard Vollum, co-founders of Tektronix, learned through their experience in the military that it was breakthrough research on radar, sonar, and other technologies that helped the Allies defeat the Axis powers in WWII. This spurred their interest in using scientific research to serve human need, and this is carried on to this day through the Trust's investment in institutions like PATH, Oregon Health and Science University, and Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center (also celebrating its 40th anniversary).

Jack knew that, if young people were given the opportunity to grow into who they were created to be, they would make significant contributions to the world. The Trust funds nonprofits that work with youth of all ages through mentoring and education to help them realize their potential. Youth-focused nonprofits abound in the region, including Junior Achievement, Boys and Girls Clubs, Young Life, Big Brothers Big Sisters, Friends of the Children, and many more, and all are doing great work shaping the leaders of tomorrow.

Jack saw the value of the arts to inspire human creativity and imagination. The Trust carries on this value by partnering with organizations like Oregon Museum of Science and Industry, Missoula Children's Theater, Imagine Children's Museum, and all things that inspire ingenuity and creativity.

Jack loved the beauty of the Northwest and was an avid outdoorsman. The Trust supports conservation all around the Pacific Northwest to preserve our region's robust natural heritage through projects that weave economic and sustainable environments. We partner with groups like Nature Conservancy, Columbia Land Trust and Headwaters Economics, and telling the story of local solutions like the documentary film "A River Among Us" about the Kalamath River Basin.

Jack thought it was important for citizens to stay actively involved with their communities to identify local solutions and organizations to promote the healthy role of government in interacting with businesses, civic leadership, and community volunteers. The Trust's investment in public policy work has helped create innovations like the Health Savings Account (HSA) and flight safety programs, as well as partnering with groups that support first amendment rights, responsibilities, and freedoms, civic engagement, and civility. This video represents Trust thinking about caring for and nurturing flourishing communities.

THE MURDOCK THREAD OF HUMAN FLOURISHING

Early on, the Trustees realized that the amount of money the Trust had would not allow it to be a national or international foundation, so they focused the granting regionally and chose to invest in the Pacific Northwest, where Jack had business and personal interests.

Trustee thinking started to shift and focus on investment in what would help cities flourish. This began to transform the way the Trust invested in urban, suburban, and rural areas in the Pacific Northwest.

In the mid-1980s, the Trustees and Trust leadership decided to grow the Trust's endowment and establish great investment partnerships rather than take a traditional investment approach. This set the Trust on a new trajectory and has provided resources for the Trust to invest more in the Northwest.

The basic building blocks to a capacity building assessment and evaluation process were put in place.

Lyn Swanson was appointed as Trustee in 1987.

The Murdock College Science Research Program, spearheaded by Neal Thorpe and Lyn Swanson in 1990, began to transform the private college science scene in the Pacific Northwest.

Neal Thorpe and John Castles were appointed as Trustees in 1995.

The Foraker Group was launched in 2001 with support from the Trust to serve Alaska's nonprofits and tribal communities. This is representative of the Trust's work to build strong nonprofit support organizations through the five-state Nonprofit Support Organization Collaborative launched in 2008 to help build capacity in the leadership of nonprofits.

Started in 2005, the New Science Faculty Start-Up Program made the Pacific Northwest competitive with the rest of the country for hiring new faculty in the sciences at private colleges and universities.

The Vision and Call Internship Program was established in 2008 to build the capacity of nonprofits and emphasize the development of young leaders in the region.

Jim Castles, Walter Dyke, and Paul Boley were appointed as the first three Trustees to steward the Trust's mission.

The Trustees chose to think about partnerships in terms of ecosystem and systemic issues and decided to focus on areas underserved by philanthropic investment. They believed the strong anchor institutions and civic assets in rural communities would help them thrive. The Trust continues to believe that a strong ecosystem consists of thriving institutions like hospitals, community theaters, historic preservation, youth-serving nonprofits, and healthy schools.

In the early 1980s, the Trustees chose to invest in targeted ways in scientific research and education. This decision resulted in a long-term commitment to Trust programs like Partners in Science, Murdock College Science Research Program, and capacity building.

The Trust began to utilize convenings as an opportunity for learning from and connecting the sectors in which it is involved.

Founded by Research Corporation and brought into the Trust in the early '90s, the Partners in Science program provides support for high school research and raises the quality of science teaching in public and private high schools.

The Trust increased its investment in underserved sectors such as faith-based nonprofits, tribal communities, and community foundations.

In the late '90s, the Trust evaluated the depth of its investments geographically and saw the need for more intentional investment in Alaska. Leaders from the Rasmuson Foundation spent time at the Trust educating Trust leadership about Alaska history and the layers and complexities of the region and its people, and a partnership was born.

2000

In the 2000s, the Trust put a greater intentionality in addressing Idaho and Montana and partnering with groups in those regions. One such area of partnership was with state nonprofit support organizations and groups such as Washington Family Foundation in Montana, the Albertson Family Foundation in Idaho, and numerous others in these states.

2015

Jeff Grubb was appointed as Trustee in 2010.

Even in the economic downturn, the Trust continued to invest in the region, particularly in groups serving those hard hit by the recession.

The mid-1990s saw the Trust choose to focus on building the capacity of leaders, boards, and organizations rather than funding the latest trends or high-profile projects of interest in the philanthropic world. At this time, Tom Harris was training arts organizations in best practices for capital projects, and the Trust partnered with him to expand this education in the Pacific Northwest, transforming the way arts organizations planned for their futures.

THERE'S A THREAD YOU FOLLOW. IT GOES AMONG THINGS THAT CHANGE. BUT IT DOESN'T CHANGE. PEOPLE WONDER ABOUT WHAT YOU ARE PURSUING. YOU HAVE TO EXPLAIN ABOUT THE THREAD. –The Way It Is by William Stafford, Oregon Poet Laureate 1975-1990

40 YEARS OF IMPACT

KOAHNIC BROADCAST CORPORATION: KBC brings Native voices to Alaska and the nation through national broadcasting and its Native radio station. The Trust helped KBC update its equipment and building to provide suitable studio and office space, expand its Native Media Empowerment training program, and develop a program to help Native youth.

ALASKA NATIVE HERITAGE CENTER: ANHC is an educational and cultural center that improves understanding among all Alaskans and encourages appreciation of Alaska Native people and their traditions, history, and contributions to Alaska. The Trust has supported several projects over the years, including new program staff, building the Native Cultural Center, and renovating the outdoor Village dwellings. ➡

MAT-SU SERVICES FOR CHILDREN AND ADULTS: MSSCA provides a wide range of home- and community-based services for Mat-Su residents with intellectual or developmental disabilities and families with children experiencing developmental delays or disabilities. The Trust funded furnishings and equipment in a new facility to help MSSCA better serve individuals in the Mat-Su region.

UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA FAIRBANKS: University of Alaska Fairbanks is a long-time grantee of the Trust, receiving nearly $3.5 million in grants since 1984. A grant of note that the Trust helped fund was optical instruments for the RV Sikuliaq, a 261-foot oceanographic research ship operated by the School of Fisheries and Ocean Sciences at the university that is capable of bringing scientists to the ice-choked waters of Alaska and the polar regions.

BASQUE MUSEUM AND CULTURAL CENTER: BMCC works to promote, preserve, and perpetuate Basque history and culture in Boise, where Basque immigrants first congregated after coming to the United States. A Trust grant helped fund a new staff person to provide education about Basque heritage.

TREY MCINTYRE PROJECT: TMP is a contemporary ballet company that works to advance the form of contemporary ballet in innovative and ground-breaking ways. Trust grants helped TMP hire a ballet master and purchase equipment for its performances.

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO: The Trust has partnered with University of Idaho since 1982 to support scientific research and instrumentation, new staff, capital projects, and special programs. A new Trust project was developed to help institutions commercialize their research, and the Trust funded U of I’s project to commercialize a technology to produce electrodes for hydrogen fuel cells, lithium ion batteries, electrochemical processing, and ultracapacitors in hybrid electric vehicles.

RIRIE HIGH SCHOOL: The Trust began funding the Partners in Science program in 2000 and has provided 529 high school science teachers with hands-on research experience to bring back to their classrooms. Andrew Bosworth, the science department chair at Ririe High School, participated in the program and says bringing his experience back into the classroom has renewed his belief that students learn science by doing science.

MONTANA

AMERICAN PRAIRIE RESERVE: APR works to create the largest nature reserve in the continental United States as a refuge for people and wildlife. Trust grants supported improvements to a camp for scientists and visitors, as well as a project to reintroduce bison to the prairie preserve.

UNIVERSITY OF MONTANA: The University of Montana is a long-time grantee of the Trust, with a partnership spanning 34 years and totaling $6.8 million in awards. A noteworthy grant in 2014 helped the university purchase new technology for its Native American Center to support science education and research among Native students.

HOPA MOUNTAIN: Hopa invests in rural and tribal citizen leaders, adults, and youth who are working to improve education, ecological health, and economic development. A Trust grant supported the expansion of Hopa's StoryMakers program, which supports rural and tribal families in promoting reading and early learning for their children.

CARROLL COLLEGE: The Trust's Vision and Call program launched in 2006 and has connected nearly 650 college-age students with internships to help them consider their vocational direction. Carroll College received Trust funding for six interns in the Theology department to participate in a senior capstone project to gain valuable ministry experience.

OREGON

HACIENDA COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION: Hacienda CDC is a Latino community development corporation that strengthens families by providing affordable housing, home-ownership support, economic advancement, and educational opportunities. Trust grants helped build and staff a new Latino public market and construct a community health clinic and social service center.

HAPPY CANYON FOUNDATION: HCF produces an annual theatrical pageant to educate spectators about the history and settlement of the American West and to preserve the customs of the Indian tribes in the area. Trust grants have helped improve the pageant facility’s mezzanine and roof.

WILD CANYON GAMES: WCG is an extreme adventure race designed to help people break through physical and emotional barriers, with all proceeds raised supporting youth charities. Trust grants helped hire new staff and to establish a business development program.

WARNER PACIFIC COLLEGE: The Trust’s Women in Leadership program exists to bring together a multigenerational group of women for training, networking, and mutual support. WPC, a small liberal arts college in Portland, has participated in the Women in Leadership program, as well as several other enrichment programs, and has received Trust grants to help build new programs, expand its science technology and teaching, improve student resources, and hire new staff. ➔

// The Trust was founded in 1975 with an endowment of $91 million. Over the last 40 years, nearly $830 million has been granted, while the endowment was at about $1 billion at the end of 2015. //

WASHINGTON

AMERICAN LAKE VETERANS GOLF COURSE: ALVGC is dedicated to providing, teaching, and promoting the benefits of golf to veterans. Over the years, the Trust has helped fund an expansion to the golf course, a rehabilitation center for wounded veterans, and an activities shelter to provide social interaction for disabled patients.

CENTER FOR WOODEN BOATS: CWB provides a gathering place to expose future generations to maritime history and small craft heritage. The Trust helped fund the construction of a new facility for education programs and the hiring of new staff.

LITTLE BIT THERAPEUTIC RIDING CENTER: LBTRC improves the bodies, minds, and spirits of children and adults with disabilities through equine-assisted therapies and activities. A Trust grant helped renovate the indoor riding area to allow LBTRC to serve more disabled children and adults.

WASHINGTON FIRST ROBOTICS: Washington FIRST exists to inspire students to pursue careers in science and technology through team-based robotics contests. The Trust helped fund a new staff member so more students can compete on robotics teams. ➔

NATIONAL & BRITISH COLUMBIA

BARNABAS FAMILY MINISTRIES: BFM is a retreat center in British Columbia dedicated to strengthening, educating, and encouraging families with time away to refocus on faith and relationships. Trust grants helped build a new conference center lodge and a new kitchen and dining facility to increase capacity for visitors.

PRISON FELLOWSHIP MINISTRIES: PFM trains and inspires churches and communities to support the restoration of those affected by incarceration and works to make prisons more rehabilitative places. The Trust funded an upgrade to PFM's administrative systems to help increase its organizational capacity.

ALL-STAR ORCHESTRA: ASO gathers the top orchestral players in the United States and produces broadcast performances to encourage the enjoyment and appreciation of classical music. ASO has received Trust grants to expand its website and its online interactive music education programs.

TRINITY WESTERN UNIVERSITY: TWU is a Christian university in British Columbia that has received several Trust grants to hire new staff, expand its science center, purchase new scientific instrumentation, and initiate a science research program. TWU has received four grants over the years through the Murdock College Research Program for Life Sciences, which funds research project initiation in the life sciences. ➡

Trust Matching Gifts Program: $445,805

The Trust matches gifts made to eligible organizations by Trust staff and Trustees to promote and encourage charitable giving.

GRANTS AWARDED 2015

299 GRANTS • $51,908,082

The Trust was launched in 1975 with the purpose of enriching the quality of life in the Pacific Northwest. This year, 2015, marked our fortieth year of partnering with organizations that strengthen and enrich the region in creative and sustainable ways.

In the first pages of this report, we looked back on the last forty years, on the milestone moments that shaped the Trust and the thousands of partnerships that that have strengthened our region's educational, social, spiritual, and creative base.

Now we take time to recognize our most recent partnerships and the organizations that are addressing today's most important issues and working for the common good. We salute these organizations, both old and new, for the work they are doing to weave the fabric of healthy and vibrant communities.

PEOPLE AT THE TRUST

Following the will of Jack Murdock, three Trustees provide oversight to the assets from his estate and to the functions of the Trust established to implement his directive of using his estate for "...religious, charitable, scientific, or educational purposes." All three original Trustees are now deceased and have been succeeded, as per instruction in Jack's will, by Trustees who serve their terms for life.

Paul L. Boley • 1975-1986

A lawyer from whom other attorneys would seek counsel, he set up the Trust and served as an original Trustee.

James B. Castles • 1975-1995

Incorporated Tektronix in 1946 and served as executor of Jack Murdock's estate and managed its assets until the Trust launched in 1975, when he was appointed Trustee.

Walter P. Dyke • 1975-1995

A scientist, entrepreneur, and educator who was science advisor to Governor Mark Hatfield before serving as an original Trustee.

Neal O. Thorpe • 1995-2010

A research scientist and educator who first served as senior program officer at the Trust, then was appointed as Trustee in 1995 and served as executive director from 1995 to 2005.

Lynwood W. Swanson • 1987-present

A Ph.D. physicist and corporate executive leader and the longest-serving Trustee since 1987.

John W. Castles • 1995-present

An entrepreneur and business leader in the Northwest who has served as Trustee since 1995.

Jeffrey T. Grubb • 2010-present

An active community leader and executive banker who was appointed Trustee in 2010.

FROM THE CHIEF INVESTMENT OFFICER

I'm blessed to be part of an organization that continues to honor the legacy Jack Murdock envisioned many years ago. For the past 40 years, our Trustees have embraced their fiduciary role, adopting an investment strategy that has allowed Jack's vision to live and thrive in the Pacific Northwest. They have remained focused on the Trust's long-term ability to support our grantees. Through their forward thinking while partnering with some of the best and brightest investment managers, the Trust's grantmaking capacity has grown steadily.

We are proud of the long-term relationships we have built with our investment managers. These relationships are the backbone of our investment program. Our managers play an integral role in the mission of the Trust, and they understand that their successes directly impact the great work of our grantees. We are deeply grateful to have investment partners that care about the Trust's mission.

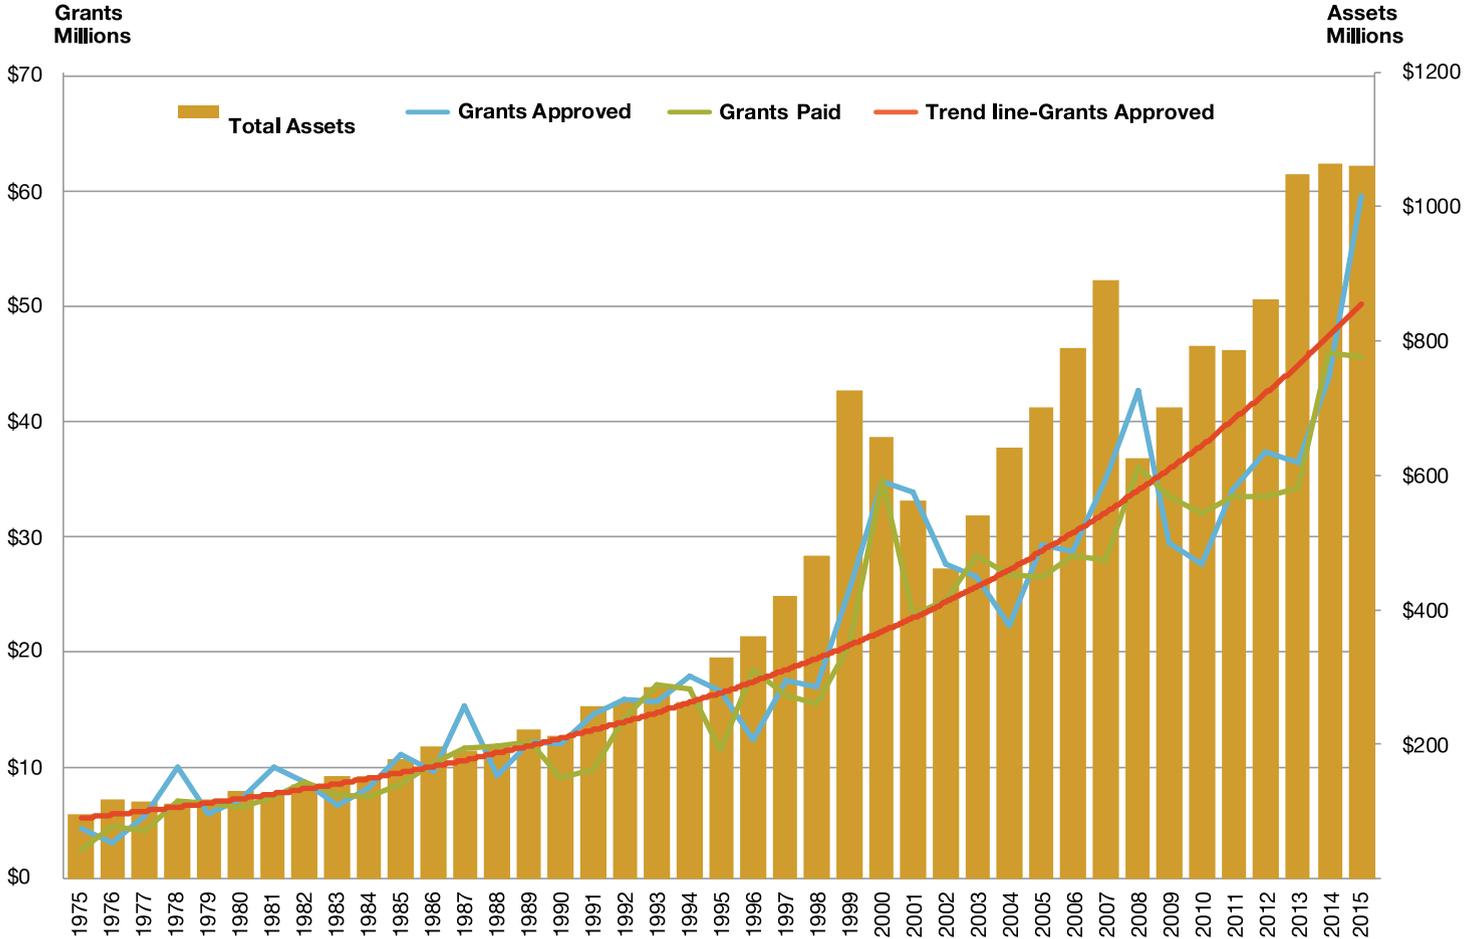

For 40 years our grantees have achieved unparalleled successes throughout the Pacific Northwest in creative and sustainable ways. It is my privilege to play a small role in an investment program that focuses on maximizing the Trust's grantmaking potential and helps make all of these successes possible.
